

Exceptions to the 18-Month Rule

A review of the support amount may be done early if:

There is a zero dollar ($0) support order in the case.

Supplemental Security Income (SSI)

- After the support order was entered, the parent who owes support started getting Supplemental Security Income (SSI) or other disability payments.
- The support order was based on the parent who owes support getting SSI or other disability payments and those payments have now stopped because the parent is no longer considered disabled.

The support order covered more than one child and the parent who owes support no longer has a duty to support at least one of those children.
